It is now 105 years since that parliament ceased to exist, and here in the city of Philadelphia we have a great gathering of its citizens to declare that the principles which Gratton represented and spoke for in 1800 are our principles more than a century afterward, and that we are determined, if it take even another century, never to rest until the parliament that was destroyed once more exists on the soil of Ireland. By armed force in open rebellion, by proper uprisings, by parliamentary representative would be no change, because the faculty of the National thought the mission of the institution was to help those buried in offices to better their condition in life. Prof. Carusi mapped out the plan of the Institution for this session and told of some new work which the students would take up. He afterward introduced several prominent.

Chosen to take the claim of the greater and six years better than an Irish parliament. If tomorrow I were given the choice whether I would have a perpetuation of the government of Ireland from Westminster and by a British parliament, although there are eighty-two Irish members there and most of them are Catholics—I say If I had mychoice between a perpetuation of the dold parliament, with not a Catholic in it. I would say, "Give me back the Irish Protestant parliament." The government of Ireland by the British parliament of Ireland by the British parliament of the Gatholic in it. The British have practically control of Egypt through a resident commissioner Egypt is nominally Turkish. The Khe dive, with his advisers, is Turkish, and all the outward forms of Turkish government are carried out. The modus operandi of the Egyptian government operandi of the Egyptian government is, to every visible appearance, Oriental. Behind the Khedive in his every movement is the British commissioner. He is absolute. As a sop to the Khedive and his executives the British commissioner and his staff are subjects of Egypt. The commissioner even wears the Turkish fez. Every effort is made by the commissioner to subvert the idea that the Khedive is not the real ruler. In effect the Khedive plays with the toys of government. When he is naughty the British commissioner makes him behave.
